

A CSSS (Comprehensive Student Support System) goal is to respond to the broad range of student needs by providing students with comprehensive, coordinated, integrated, and custom supports that are accessible, timely, and strength-based so students can achieve in school. An array of student support services is an inventory of programs and services to develop competent students. The focus is on prevention efforts that support student success. The array of services is identified through five levels of student support. Each level increases in intensity or specialization of service.

Levels of Support and Services

Level 1: Basic Support for All Students: Students have diverse needs that are addressed in the inclusive classroom. Teachers, along with other school personnel, routinely provide support and guidance to students at school and assist families in addressing the students' needs at home.

Level 2: Informal Additional Support Through Collaboration: Level 2 assistance is additional support beyond what the classroom teacher primarily provides. There is more targeted collaboration with various other school personnel, e.g., the counselor, SSC, administrator, department or grade level teachers. These support activities are carried out in an informal, supportive manner.

Level 3: Individualized School and Community Based Programs: Level 3 services encompass even further assistance designed for specific groups or needs. Level 3 supports are generally provided as a result of a Student Support meeting.

Level 4: Specialized Services for DOE and/or Other Agencies: When a student requires specialized assessment or assistance, a Student Support team is convened by the SSC to collaboratively develop a plan that meets the needs of the student. The plan may include a referral for Section 504, special education, related services, community agency support, mental health services, as well as Level 1, 2, or 3 services. At this level, there are IDEA, Section 504, equity, and other legal requirements that must be complied.

Level 5: Intensive and Multiple Agency Services: When the needs of the student and family require intensive multi-agency supports, the Student Support team develops a plan that integrates the resources and services of the DOE and other agencies. Student placement may be at off-campus therapeutic and/or educational programs.
